

has acted as an inspiration on the ground as well as our many others. All my family are. I am proud of my sister Caroline & Emma Western. My daughter Elizabeth & Anne & my son Henry, - all unite in most affectionate remembrance to you. It does not seem as if you were one whom I could not thank & make for the years of and true
I am yours
Truly
yours
Wm. Lloyd Garrison

GARRISON
MSS.

To Elizabeth
Perrin

I gratefully acknowledge your kind letter of the 25th
1847

Wm. Lloyd Garrison

give to that sacred cause and its advocates.

I know you will rejoice to hear that we have been able to do somewhat for its service even here.
We forwarded three immense cases of articles for the fair, so selected that they will not be duplicates of the contributions of English friends. We made an exposition of them, to which among others came Madame Rognerel, who is every year concerned in a Fair for the Protestant schools, & she pronounced the Articles beautiful even for Paris, & took note of them for her own future guidance. So I cannot but hope that our contributions will be worthy to appear by the side of those of our British Friends.

Before we leave Paris I trust we shall be able to do something more effectual for the cause. The May seems to open to inspire a sympathy for it.

My objects in coming hither are completely answered as for as regards my children they have made great progress in all they have undertaken.

Aside from success in particular branches of education, it is good to become cosmopolitan early in life, & to be able to say with an experimental feeling, "My Country is the world My countrymen are all mankind." It is a foolish pride & Patriotism which does more to sustain Slavery than any thing else, except the love of power & of money.
"Our Country right or wrong" is very apt to be the man-cry of those who have seen no country but their own. Abolitionists are to be excepted from this. To them the cause